Project Summary/Abstract Angiopoietin-Tie signaling controls the switch between angiogenesis and angiostasis, thus maintaining a stable vascular system under physiological conditions. For several months, we have been investigating how Angiopoietin-Tie signaling is regulated in tumors. Our studies indicate that Angiopoietin-Tie signaling is regulated by microRNAs in tumor cells that are metastatic to distant organs. Our recent preliminary data indicate that another microRNA, miR-32, which is involved in a wide variety of normal biological processes, is also induced in tumor cells and acts to modulate tumor angiogenesis. In the next funding period, we propose to study in detail the signaling pathways that lead to upregulation of miR-32 in tumor cells and also the molecular mechanisms by which miR-32 modulates tumor angiogenesis. We have already started to study miR-32 in tumor angiogenesis by analyzing the role of miR-32 in tumor cells that are injected intravenously into nude mice. Our preliminary studies show that overexpression of miR-32 in tumor cells can slow tumor growth in the mice and also increase the levels of apoptosis in the tumors, suggesting that miR-32 is able to down-regulate the formation of blood vessels in tumors. We will analyze the mechanism by which miR-32 down-regulates tumor angiogenesis and we will try to
